Classic Chipping Campden - Jewel in the Crown of the Cotswolds

From woollen wealth to arts & crafts...

Chipping Campden's long and flowing main street gives the town its shape and style. Frequently described as the 'jewel in the crown' of the Cotswold towns, this is also one of the best preserved and most historically important towns in the area.

The town has a long history of wool and wealth, reflected in its wonderful stone buildings. Its more recent history includes the arts & craft movement when artists and designers took up residence around 1900. Court Barn Museum in Church Street showcases a glittering collection of silver, jewellery, printing and furniture. Today, there are a number of galleries and craft shops selling contemporary crafts.

Chipping Campden is a place to stop and breathe in the atmosphere of your surroundings. Notable buildings include the Grevel House, the 14th century Woolstaplers Hall, Town Hall and St James Church – a fine Cotswolds 'wool church'. Alongside, are the gates of Campden House, much damaged in the Civil War. The ancient word 'Chipping' refers to a market and the Market Hall was built in 1627 to sell butter, cheese and poultry.

On nearby Dover's Hill, Captain Robert Dover founded the Cotswold Olimpicks in the 17th century and they are still celebrated every year with a quirky mix of sports, games and festivities.
